

Photos under the sea

Thinking of hanging photos for your first big exhibition? You would normally need frames, white walls, and photo-flattering lights. If that sounds dry and boring, follow Bertrand Cadilhac's lead and head underwater to showcase your pictures! This past May, he dove into the waters off Thailand to turn the sea itself into a photo gallery (for a few hours only, so local environmentalists wouldn't carp). Twelve photos, suspended from fishing line above the surface, floated amid coral and colorful fish. "The undersea exhibition was filmed and photographed to bring these uplifting visions back to dry land," says Cadilhac. Want more? Go to www.stingray-project.com. —C.H.